Jenny Richards is the founder of Deliverance Dogs, where she works with handlers who want to build genuine partnership through thoughtful, purposeful training. She has represented Great Britain at the IGP World Championships on three occasions with her Belgian Malinois, an experience that has further shaped her understanding of high-level performance and partnership. Her approach places relationship and communication at the centre of everything she teaches. Rather than viewing exercises in isolation, Jenny focuses on developing the understanding, clarity and trust between dog and handler that allow precision, confidence and consistency to emerge naturally. Jenny is passionate about helping handlers become more readable to their dogs, creating partnerships that work with confidence, accuracy and enjoyment. Her coaching encourages handlers to look beyond individual exercises and instead develop the foundations that support reliable, expressive performances in the ring. Whether you're looking to improve precision, build confidence, or strengthen the partnership you share with your dog, Jenny's coaching provides practical, individual guidance designed to create lasting progress.
